POP Allston serves up free music, cheap beer

PBR. The new pop-up space opened its doors Monday.

What was once a bike shop and would soon become an apartment complex was the site of a party straight out of hip Bostonians' dreams on Monday.

Under a punishing Labor Day sun, PA speakers blasted out performances from local musicians, vintage T-shirts swapped hands and $2 Pabst Blue Ribbon flowed by the cupful.

It was a free outdoor neighborhood block party and the grand opening for POP Allston, a temporary pop-up space on Brighton Avenue that houses a free indoor skate park, DIY bike shop and community space. Boston's Mayor Marty Walsh announced the space's launch in June. It will stay there until developers begin converting it to 138 units of transit-oriented housing.

For now, partygoers said, the multi-use building and parking lot could be the next big thing in the neighborhood, home to thousands of Boston's college kids and 20-somethings.

"If this is accessible and anybody with a good idea and a budget can get it, this would be the perfect performance space for summers," said Michael Christmas, a local rapper and onetime Allston resident, just after his set on the block party's outdoor stage for a crowd of 200 or so. "I could see a lot of shows for local artists here, and I'll go to all of them."

The party was also a tribute to Allston Christmas, the city's big annual day for young renters to move in and out of apartments. So it featured a red, white and blue (PBR-sponsored) plastic holiday tree and a "Merry Allston Christmas" mural painted on a brick wall outside. The complimentary "bicycle valet" booth, sponsored by the CommonWheels Bicycle Collective, was decked out with stockings and ornaments.

Inside the new indoor space, Sam Kleiman was selling vintage T-shirts — a lot of them, he said, though he declined to give specifics. He said he usually sells shirts, ranging from $15 to more than $500 (for a rare Sex Pistols T-shirt), on Sundays at the SoWa Open Market in the South End, but said he was looking forward to reaching a new audience.

"I'm happy to be part of it from the very beginning and kicking off the space," said Kleiman, who also promotes his shirts on Instagram (@bowiecokemirror). "This is a great opportunity for me."

Body found on beach

A passerby found the body of an adult male on the shore Monday morning, officials said.

State police were investigating at Constitution Beach on Monday morning after a body was discovered washed up on its shore.

A person discovered the body, believed to be that of an adult male, around 8 a.m., according to a release from the Suffolk District Attorney's Office. No further identification was immediately available. SPENCER BUELL

Labor Day. Pro-labor groups march in Boston

As President Barack Obama wrapped up his Labor Day visit to the city, a few hundred demonstrators were marching through Boston on Monday morning to fight for better working conditions and a $15 minimum wage.

A coalition of pro-labor groups representing workers in Boston-area fast-food restaurants, hotels and Logan Airport met for a pre-march rally in Boston Common.

Among the crowd was Darius Cephas, a 24-year-old Dorchester resident who told Metro he earns $9.25 working at McDonald's.

"We're tired of working hard and not getting paid for that," said Cephas, a national organizing committee leader with the Fight for $15, a national movement to increase the minimum wage. Low-wage employers, he said, "force you to rely on government assistance."

The minimum wage in Massachusetts is $9, set to increase to $11 by 2017.

"It's not just teenagers," said Jena Benson, 18, of Dorchester. Families, too, face the struggle of living paycheck to paycheck, the Dunkin' Donuts worker told Metro. She said she makes $9.50 at a Seaport outpost of the coffee chain.

In bilingual speeches on the Common, speakers celebrated the state's passage of a ballot question mandating paid sick time for employers with 11 or more employees, new protections for domestic workers passed in 2014 and a new raise for airport workers to $11 an hour.

But Roxana Rivera, a vice president of the Service Employees International Union, said in an interview with Metro there is "still a lot of work that remains to get done."

"These wins are changing the lives of workers

A protester / DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

and their families across the state. But we are winning because we are fighting," Rivera said from a podium on the Boston Common Gazebo. "We are fighting to come out of the shadows." SPENCER BUELL

Boston. Obama orders government contractors to offer paid sick leave

President Barack Obama on Monday ordered government contractors to offer their workers seven days of paid sick leave a year and, without naming them, knocked Republican presidential candidates for advocating what he said were anti-union policies.

Obama signed an executive order on sick leave during a flight on Air Force One to Boston, where he spoke at a union event. The White House said it would affect some 300,000 people.

Starting in 2017, workers on government contracts will earn a minimum of one hour of paid sick leave for every 30 hours worked. Contractors can offer more generous amounts at their discretion.

Speaking to a friendly crowd without a tie or jacket, Obama said such policies were beneficial to employers.

Obama, who joked that he was glad not to be on the ballot next year, made thinly veiled references to Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker and New Jersey

Gov. Chris Christie for anti-union remarks and policies. He did not name them by name.

The executive order follows a series of measures by the White House to expand access to paid leave. In January, Obama issued a presidential memorandum directing the government to advance up to six weeks of paid sick leave for the birth or adoption of a child, or for other sick leave-eligible uses. REUTERS

Four things to know

'Glaring errors' led court to annul Knox murder conviction

Italy's top court threw out a conviction of American Amanda Knox for the 2007 murder of her British flatmate due to "glaring errors" in the case against her, a document showed on Monday.

The brutal stabbing of 21-year-old Meredith Kercher prompted a zigzag of contradictory rulings which ended in March with the acquittal of Knox and her Italian boyfriend Raffaele Sollecito, casting an uncomfortable spotlight on Italy's legal system.

The Court of Cassation said there were no certain biological traces of Knox or Sollecito in the room where the murder was committed, nor on the victim's body.

"There was no shortage of glaring errors in the underlying fabric of the sentence in question," the court wrote in the official explanation of its reasons for striking down the second guilty verdict handed to the pair.

Ivory Coast-born Rudy Guede, who is serving a 16-year sentence for the murder after opting for a fast-track trial, left "copious" biological traces at the scene, the court said.

Knox and Sollecito said they were innocent of killing Kercher, who had been Knox's housemate in the town of Perugia, throughout two convictions, two acquittals and four years each in jail. REUTERS

Apple ups hiring to make smarter phones

Apple has ramped up its hiring of artificial intelligence experts, recruiting from Ph.D. programs, posting dozens of job listings and greatly increasing the size of its AI staff.

The goal is to challenge Google in an area the Internet search giant has long dominated: smartphone features that give users what they want before they ask.

As part of its push, the company is currently trying to hire at least 86 more employees with expertise in the branch of artificial intelligence known as machine learning, according to a recent analysis of Apple job postings. REUTERS

Uber China raises $1.2B in ongoing fundraising

Uber Technologies Inc.'s China unit has raised $1.2 billion as part of an ongoing fundraising round, the U.S. ride-hailing service's CEO Travis Kalanick said on Monday, even as its Chinese rival Didi Kuaidi raises $3 billion.

Uber's Kalanick made the comments in an interview with Chinese news website Sina.com, which were confirmed by an Uber China spokeswoman. REUTERS

US asks Greece to deny Russian flights to Syria

The United States has asked Greece to deny Russia the use of its air-space for supply flights to Syria, a Greek official said, after Washington told Moscow it was deeply concerned by reports of a Russian military buildup in Syria.

The Greek foreign ministry said the request was being examined. Russian news wire RIA Novosti earlier said Greece had refused the U.S. request, quoting a diplomatic source as saying that Russia was seeking permission to run the flights up to Sept. 24.

Russia, which has a base in the Syrian port of Tartous, has sent flights to Latakia, which it has also used to bring home Russian nationals who want to leave. REUTERS

IN CONVERSATION WITH
STEPHEN KING

Yeah, they don't seem too thrilled to be next to each other.

Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck are yelling at each other

Recent photos of Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck hanging out and smiling together — plus reports that they've been seeing a marriage counselor — may give some fans hope that their divorce could be called off, but sources tell Radar Online that you shouldn't get your hopes up — especially not after a particularly contentious throwdown between the warring exes over which of Affleck's friends might also be having their nanny work overtime. "Jennifer verbally attacked Ben personally just over a week ago. She got p—ed off and asked him why she should be surprised that he's sleeping with the nanny when his friends are doing the same thing," a source says. "Basically she accused him of supporting another sham marriage and looking the other way." Juicy!

So how about those hints of them working things out? "They've made attempts to put on happy, cooperative faces for their uncoupling, but the argument was a watershed moment," the source says. "Ben is p—ed off, and it's had massive reverberations for Jennifer. Privately, Ben is done with the charade." Yeah, that sounds pretty severe.

Will and Jada somehow make it through the summer

Let's check in with Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith, shall we? When we started the summer, there were fresh reports that the long-married couple would be done by fall, but here we are post-Labor Day and they're apparently doing just fine. What's their secret? A good personal trainer, as it turns out. Fitness guru Darrell Foster "has been very focused on keeping Will and Jada 'on the right track' not just physically but mentally as well," a source says, according to Star magazine. "He's as much a marriage counselor as he is a boxing coach or a guy who counts pushups. He's always at their house working out with either Will or Jada when they aren't on the road filming. They now follow Darrell's advice to the letter."

Jessica Alba's Honest Company sued for not being honest enough

Whoops!

So Jessica Alba's business venture — the billion-dollar-valued Honest Company — is being sued because it "deceptively and misleadingly labeled and marketed" several products as "natural" when the ingredients were anything but. Can you imagine? Alba herself, apparently, can't, as she's released a statement about the suit. "The allegations against us are baseless and without merit. We strongly stand behind our products," she says in a statement. "We are steadfast in our commitment to transparency and openness."

Johnny Depp talks Australian dog debacle

Before Johnny Depp can get around to promoting his work playing infamous Whitey Bulger in "Black Mass," he first has to clear things up about his own criminal activity — namely violating Australian quarantine laws by smuggling his and wife Amber Heard's two tiny Yorkshire terriers into the country, earning the ire of one overzealous politician. So how did all of that turn out? "I killed my dogs and ate them under direct orders from some kind of, I don't know, sweaty, big-gutted man from Australia," Depp joked during a press conference at the Venice Film Festival. At least I hope he's joking. Yorkies don't really make much of a meal.

Stephen Colbert is done being 'Stephen Colbert'

Interview. The new host of "The Late Show" thinks audiences are having more trouble with his old persona than he is.

In the last couple of years, the world of late night shows has seen a tremendous amount of turnover. From Jimmy Fallon taking over from Jay Leno to James Corden taking over from Craig Ferguson, new faces abound in late night. And now, with David Letterman's departure, the last of the late night stalwarts has left, and Stephen Colbert is ready to host.

Colbert begins his show with an extra challenge, in that people have never really gotten to know him as himself. Instead, he's been playing the part of "Stephen Colbert" for well over a decade now, between "The Daily Show" and "The Colbert Report."

"When I interviewed the first person, the first time I did it, [the 'Colbert Report' character] sat on my shoulder and said, 'Shut up. Let me do this one. I know what to say next.' And I eventually got him to quiet down," Colbert says with a laugh.

One thing Colbert won't worry about too much is talking to his high-profile guests, since he loved doing it as part of "The Colbert Report."

"It became my favorite part. I thought it was going to be the jokes, but it became the interviews," he says.

"I want to have a point of view about what their project is, or what their position is if it's political, or what the idea of their book is, or whatever it is," he explains.

"The nice thing about having done it as a character is that I learned as a performer at all times to be passionately attached to what you're talking about, because then the conversation has legs. You're not pretending," he says, before pausing and adding, "I don't fake my orgasms."

Predecessors

Advice from the expert

Colbert picked up one last piece of advice from Letterman before he left. The building the show films in has an old freight elevator that Letterman had protected during renovations, and Colbert decided to keep it, too. "After we talked for about an hour and a half — and he was gracious with his time — I said,

'One last thing, would you show me how to run the elevator?' And he goes, 'Oh, it's the best thing in the building!' He showed me how to run it, then he showed me how to open the door so the elevator would be right there, and he said, 'There, now it's waiting for you,'" says Colbert. "He left me with the keys, you might say."

Visit Metro.us to read up on tonight's USMNT match at Gillette Stadium.

Pats almost always good for 11 victories

NFL. Finding value in NFL season win total over/unders.

Summer is over. Gambling season is here.

There's money to be made when it comes to NFL season win total over/unders, which will surely fluctuate this week. So if you see a number you like, jump on it now or forever hold your peace.

Patriots 10.5 – over

If you can get the Pats at 10.5, ride it all day. The last time the Patriots were put through the national wringer like this, they went 16-0 in the regular season. Bulletin board material doesn't work great with grown men, but this is for sure: Bill Belichick will never, ever have to make up motivational B.S. out of thin air again after what transpired this past off-season. Since 2001, the Patriots have grabbed at least 11 wins each season — save for 2002 (9-7), 2005 (10-6) and 2009 (10-6). They have gone 12-4 in each of the past three seasons.

Giants 8.5 – under

The face of the Giants offense (Eli Manning) is delusional. The face of the Giants defense (Jason Pierre-Paul) will find it hard to play the piano and swipe left on Tinder for the rest of his life. The head coach of the Giants is older than David Letterman. This is far from a playoff team.

Falcons 8.5 – over

Things obviously change overnight in the NFL and harkening back to the 2012 season is not something you should do too often when you're about to wager a paycheck. But Matt Ryan led his team to a 13-3 record three years back. Things bottomed out in 2013, as Atlanta went 4-12 and expectations were high for a bounceback season in 2014. The Falcons didn't entirely flip the script last year, but they did improve — going 6-10. Ryan turned 30 this year — the definition of a prime year

Tom Brady no doubt has more than a few people on his "bleep list" heading into the 2015 season. / GETTY IMAGES for an NFL quarterback. New head coach Dan Quinn has already done a fine job of revamping the Atlanta defense. Roll the dice with the Falcons.

Patriots hurting at WR position

The biggest surprise from Patriots "cut-down day" this past Saturday came with the news that wide receiver Reggie Wayne asked for and was granted his release. With Brandon LaFell on the physically unable to perform list, the Patriot are hurting at wide receiver.

NESN.com reporter Doug Kyed wrote this past weekend that the Patriots are actively shopping for a "big-bodied wide receiver."

Julian Edelman and Danny Amendola will likely be Tom Brady's main non-tight end targets

Thursday night against the Steelers with Aaron Dobson getting some work on the outside.

The Pats did address the need for depth at the receiver position as they brought back Kenbrell Thompkins in a practice squad role. Thompkins played with Oakland last season. MATT BURKE
